CONTRIBUTORS

Andrea CASTIGLIONI is Assistant Professor at Nagoya City University, specializing in early modern Shugendō history and ascetic movements. Recent publications include The Bloomsbury Handbook of Japanese Religions, ed. (2021); Defining Shugendō: Critical Studies on Japanese Mountain Religion, ed. (2020); “Devotion in Flesh and Bone: The Mummified Corpses of Mount Yudono Ascetics in the Edo Period” (Asian Ethnology 78); and “From Your Name to Shin-Gojira: Spiritual Crisscrossing, Spatial Soteriology, and Catastrophic Identity in Contemporary Japanese Visual Culture,” in Spirits and Animism in Contemporary Japan (2019).

Allan G. GRAPARD is Professor Emeritus at the University of California, Santa Barbara. His extensive body of scholarship on Esoteric Buddhism, sacred space, and Shinto-Buddhist combinatory systems includes Kukai: La vérité finale des trois enseignements (1985); The Protocol of the Gods: A Study of the Kasuga Cult in Japanese History (1992); Mountain Mandalas: Shugendō in Kyushu (2016), as well as many influential articles on Japanese religion.

HUANG Xiaolong is JSPS International Research Fellow at the Historiographical Institute, The University of Tokyo. Her research focuses on Japanese Buddhist temples in the thirteenth to sixteenth centuries. Her recent publications include Muromachiki Echizen no kuni ni okeru jishū dōjō no tenkai to chūō kenryoku (Chihōshi kenkyū 405). She is presently working on a book based on her JSPS postdoctoral project titled “Religious Power and Social Changes in Late Medieval Japan.”

KOBAYASHI Naoko is Associate Professor of Religion at Aichi Gakuin University, Research Associate at the Nanzan Institute for Religion and Culture, and visiting researcher at the Gender and Religions Research Center at Ryukoku University. She is the author of several articles on topics related to women ascetic practitioners and coedited a special issue of the JRS (44/1, 2017). Her recent publications in English include “The Necessity of Gender Perspective in Folk Religious Studies” (Journal of Religious Studies 93/2), and “Women, Case Study: Mountain Worship and Women,” in The Bloomsbury Handbook of Japanese Religions (2021).

Joseph S. O’LEARY, an Irish theologian resident in Japan since 1983, taught at Sophia University and held the Roche Chair for Interreligious Research at Nanzan University in 2015–2016. He has pursued dialogue with Buddhist thought in Philosophie occidentale et concepts bouddhistes (2011); Conventional and Ultimate Truth: A Key for Fundamental Theology (2015); Buddhist Nonduality, Paschal Paradox: A Christian Commentary on the Teaching of Vimalakīrti (Vimalakīrtinirdeśa) (2018); and Reality Itself: Philosophical Challenges of Indian Mahāyāna (2019).

Fabio RAMBELLI is Professor of Japanese Religions at the University of California, Santa Barbara, where he holds the International Shinto Foundation endowed Chair in Shinto Studies. His books include Buddhist Materiality (2007); A Buddhist Theory of Semiotics (2013); The Sea and the Sacred in Japan, ed. (2018); and Spirits and Animism in Contemporary Japan, ed. (2019). He works at the intersection of philosophical discourses, material practices, and everyday life in premodern Japan. He also plays music; his albums include Yellow Flower (with Sofar Sonear, 2017) and Neo Archē (Fabio Rambelli and Rory Lindsay, 2020).

Dan SHERER is a Lecturer in the Asian Studies Department of the Faculty of Humanities at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. His research focuses on the Sengoku period, especially the role of smaller, non-warrior groups and how they interacted with warrior power. His current research focuses on the Nichiren sect in Kyoto, especially their relationship with the regimes of the three unifiers.

Jacqueline I. STONE is Professor Emerita in the Department of Religion at Princeton University. Her chief research field is Japanese Buddhism. Her ongoing research interests include the Japanese reception of the Lotus Sūtra with a focus on the Tendai and Nichiren traditions, Buddhism and national identity, and modern reformulations of Buddhism. Presently she is working on a book-length study of Nichiren. She is the author of Original Enlightenment and the Transformation of Medieval Japanese Buddhism (1999) and Right Thoughts at the Last Moment: Buddhism and Deathbed Practices in Early Medieval Japan (2017), and co-author of Two Buddhas Seated Side by Side: A Guide to the Lotus Sūtra (2019).

Rebecca SUTER is Associate Professor of Japanese Studies at the University of Sydney, where she teaches and researches in Japanese and comparative literature and Asian cultural studies. Her recent publications include Holy Ghosts: The Christian Century in Modern Japanese Fiction (2015) and Two-World Literature: Kazuo Ishiguro's Early Novels (2020).

Mark TEEUWEN is Professor of Japanese Studies at the University of Oslo. His publications deal with the history of Japanese religion, with a focus on Shinto and shrines. He is currently preparing a monograph on the history of Kyoto's Gion festival, to be published in the Bloomsbury Shinto Series.
